The Industrial Monitoring System project is built on the Internet of Things (IoT). Arduino is used to control various sensorizing smoke and temperature sensors) providing complete control over the industry. The Internet of Things (IoT) is used in this project to deliver data to the user. These systems are self-contained and do not need to interact with humans. The system feeds signals from several sensors, such as the smoke and temperature to the Arduino microcontroller. At the same time, the information would be displayed on the LCD for manual control. An alarm will sound can be detected and message can be sent to the user through cloud application.
